What do we do now?

Online and

Because we serve an area of widely dispersed population, we try to link people in two ways online

First of all we try to link people to Christian resources.

Every week we produce videos of sermons and sermon extracts, produce blogs, publicise free e-books and tweet thoughtful one liners, and we are online to answer and respond personally if that's required.

Secondly we try to link people together and create community using our internet and social media presence ... check it out at (e.g.) 'Grace Christian Community Llandeilo' on Facebook!

On the ground

We are COMMITTED TO putting boots on the ground!

We run a Sunday service each week in Llandeilo, start house groups (bottom left), visit local village schools each week, run an out-reach youth club in a strategic village 15 miles out of town, and sustain a rural chaplaincy outreach in three livestock markets each week. These marts attract people from rural communities right across the bottom half of Wales. And we do all this on a shoestring budget.

As we are actively involved in agriculture we are able to offer an informed and farmer-friendly Christian presence.

But the practical and spiritual needs in our rural communities are expanding, and it's time to take this Christian outreach into a third dimension.

What part might you be able to play in this with us?

What do we need to do next?

On the Road

Recent conversations with FIEC, Rural Ministries and others with whom we partner, have led us to believe that the time is now right to get the Rural Chaplaincy onto the road.

So we are working on equipping an exhibition trailer to house a more holistic outreach, carrying things churches make available to the urban poor right out into the (arguably poorer) rural communities that lie around us.

We plan to use this to provide an access point, regularly taking practical services right out into the heart of rural communities at livestock marts, small local agricultural shows and village centres, offering people (without distinction) access to practical and spiritual resources in matters where they might feel they have a need.

Youth and student groups involved in ministry training have declared interest in partnering with us alongside this.
